When Zak designed his E-commerce website, he had a choice to make. He could have used a traditional CMS like WordPress or Joomla, but he wanted something that was more modern and user-friendly. He chose to use a headless CMS, which allowed him to use a modern front-end framework like React or Vue.js. This gave him the flexibility to create a custom user experience for his customers. He also chose to use a cloud-based hosting provider, which allowed him to scale his website as needed. This was a smart choice for a business that was just getting started.
